SERVICE BLUEPRINT

It is difficult to determine whether employment can serve as an important turning point in the life course of young offenders (Uggen, 2000; Lageson & Uggen, 2013).

The Skill Mill - EVALUATION

Socially meaningful employment in The Skill Mill contributes to community well-being and can serve as a 'turning point' for young offenders.

Data was collected by the Newcastle Youth Offending Team (YOT) at three-month intervals to examine the effectiveness of participation in the Skill Mill program for reducing crime.

We used longitudinal data, where data was collected every three months over a 10-year period (2006–2015) for a sample of 37 young people. There are two categories of offenders in the dataset: those who were referred to Newcastle YOT and went into The Skill Mill, and those who were referred to Newcastle YOT and did not go into The Skill Mill (control group). There were 14 individuals in The Skill Mill during the study time period and 23 individuals in the control group during that time.

There was no significant differences in the means of number of offences, offence seriousness and risk scores between The Skill Mill participants and those in the control in the selection process.

The Skill Mill - EVALUATION

Those who have entered and/or completed The Skill Mill average significantly fewer offences than members of the control group during the similar time period.

Specifically, involvement in The Skill Mill reduces the number of offences by an average of 1.1 over each three-month period, compared the control group.

Participation in The Skill Mill significantly reduces the number of offences an individual commits compared to both (a) the same ex-offenders before they began The Skill Mill and (b) the control group who have spent a similar amount of time under the supervision of youth services.

Furthermore, those who participate in The Skill Mill have significantly lower offence seriousness scores than similar ex-offenders in the control group.

The Skill Mill - EVALUATION

For the young people

There was a sense of 'doing good' and a desire to be seen as 'worker' not 'offender'.

Peer and supervisor relationships were critical to success.

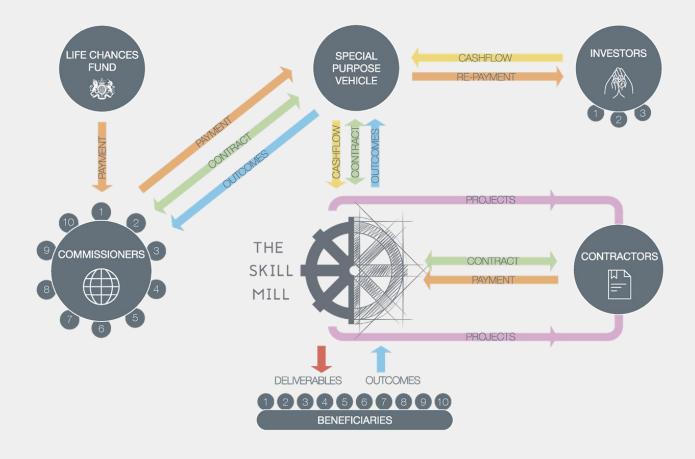

Challenges still exist

Government Policy and working across government departments is complex.

Austerity has forced new ways of funding activity and require more innovative solutions

The Skill Mill - currently awarded funding and utilising a Social Impact Bond in order to run 10 sites in the UK from January 2019.

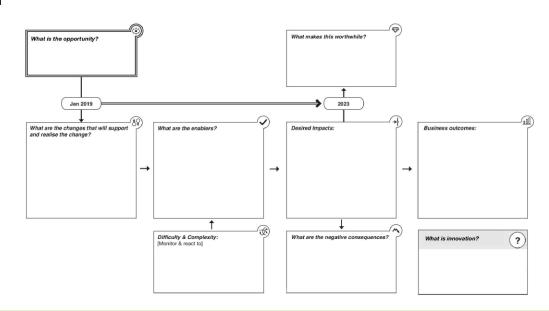

The Skill Mill - the financial instrument: Social Impact Bond

Innovation within SMEs is a 'difficult undertaking, especially for firms with little experience and limited resources' (Hadjimanolis, 1999).

A set of in-depth unstructured interviews with the enterprise's leadership team, including Directors, Business Development Manager, and Supervisor to map and model the innovation opportunity. The model aims to identify key value propositions developed or aimed for within the organisation and relate enablers and changes required to deliver.

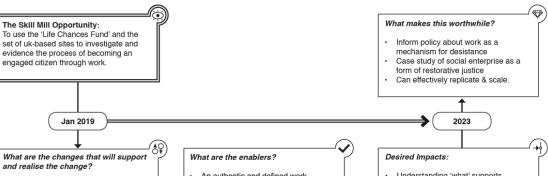

Skill Mill Opportunity Model

Standpoint:

 \rightarrow

What if the 'magic' of 'The Skill Mill' is that it is just work.

- Supervisor development infrastructure
 Robust research approach and
- methodology

 Understanding and management of work landscape in each site's location
- A set of employer policies and
- recorded variation of local practices Acceptance that the experience of work at each site is different.

- An authentic and defined work environment: culture, values, processes and practises
- A learning mechanism to ensure site differences and effects are understood and best practise shared and adopted
- A well defined set of 'work' opportunities at each site
- Evidence for the transformations of The Skill Mill's Young People.

- Understanding 'what' supports employability and reduces re-offending
 Clarity about the value and level of
- regional autonomy

 The Skill Mill is a sustainable enterprise
- The Skill Mill is a sustainable enterprise delivering on its social mission
- Understanding of the transformation, and their factors, which the Young People evidence.

Business outcomes:

 \rightarrow

- Evidence base of financial savings based upon successful desistance
- Targets met against all LCF criteria
 Increasingly successful performance
- Increasingly successful performance against outcomes 4+5
- Job Creation within The Skill Mill.

Difficulty & Complexity: [Monitor & react to]

- Defining The Skill Mill ways of working and its values
- Misaligned perceptions about purpose and scope
- Local authorities/partners need to trust its value and support its delivery
- The Human Resources to build and support the organisational infrastructure
- Flexibility to ajust and adapt the user experience of The Skill Mill
 Reluctance to define and formalise
- operations and distribute roles
 Reliance upon YOTs. Necessity of
- YOTs

What are the negative consequences?

- Reliance on the supervisors' capabilities
- Maintaining authentic 'employment' produces challenges for the research approach & its tools
- Site variance will add to the complexity of management and quality assurance.

The Skill Mill Innovation:

The novel part of The Skill Mill is that it employs ex-youth offenders.

It capitalises on a unique set of organisational (and expertise) partnerships.

The Skill Mill is potentially innovative in its employment culture for supporting ex-youth offenders within work.

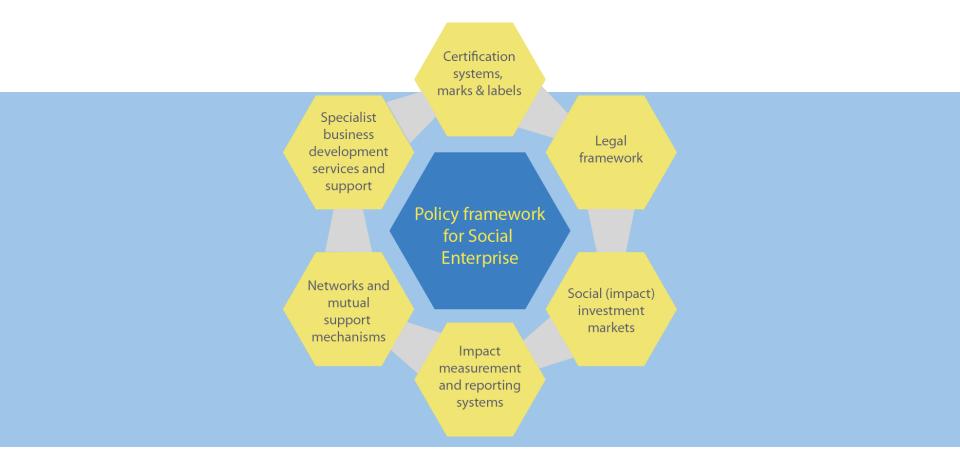

The Skill Mill is innovative in delivering positive social impact in support of the Youth Justice System.
